LAS VEGAS, October 22, 2019 — Holley Driggs Walch Fine Puzezy Stein & Thompson law firm is pleased to announce that they are expanding into the NFL sports arena on the cusp of the recent relocation of the Las Vegas Raiders, formerly Oakland Raiders, and the 2020 NFL Draft coming to the Las Vegas Strip.

HD Sports Agency, launched in October 2019, will be a specialized division of the Firm committed to providing the highest quality representation and dedicated legal service to NFL eligible players and athletes across the country. The full-service NFL agency will offer clients the best of both worlds: the bench of a large law firm, but the personal attention of an agent who knows the ropes as a former collegiate football athlete. Services will be focused on contract negotiation, endorsement deals, and personal brand protection. Auxiliary athlete services include business formation, community outreach management, estate planning, and other civil legal services.

“As a firm, we’re excited to have our hometown team the Las Vegas Raiders begin playing at Allegiant Stadium next season, and the opportunity to possibly represent our local NFL athletes,” said Managing Shareholder Ronald J. Thompson. “We’re also looking forward to showcasing Nevada to eligible players at the 2020 NFL Draft.”

Leading the HD Sports team is Shareholder F. Thomas Edwards, NFL Players Association Certified Player Agent, specializing in NFL Collective Bargaining Agreement contract negotiations, endorsement and sponsorship deals, corporate partnerships, and personal brand protection. Tom has practiced law for almost 15 years and has extensive experience advising clients on contract disputes and litigation. His NFLPA certification in 2019 was a natural legal service extension given his passion for football and his litigation background specific to contracts.

“It’s great to get back into football and serve as a guide transitioning collegiate football athletes to a career at the professional level,” said Firm Shareholder and NFLPA Player Agent Tom Edwards.
